VICUS VISSER

Singing the Dream for South Africa

with Vincent Visser

Sunday, February 10 at 5pm
Kennedy Center Family Theater

In 2010, a YouTube video of a ten-year-old boy, singing "These Arms" by All-4-One, appeared on the Internet. Hundreds of thousands of people viewed the video with predictions that he would become the next Michael Jackson. Rumor had it that the boy, known only as Vicus, was from Africa's Eastern Cape. And so began an extensive search, with international record executives heading to South Africa in pursuit of this extraordinary boy.

Now 19, Vicus Visser completed high school in Johannesburg and is pursuing a music career alongside his brother, Vincent. Don't miss the U.S. debut of this amazing young artist as he takes the world by storm.

This performance is free, but tickets are required.

Call WPAS Ticket Services at (202) 785-9727 (WPAS) to reserve your seats.
